On Your Feet began by mistake. On a wet November Saturday in 1996, two unsuspecting bald guys with glasses (an ad planner and an improviser) met at a bakery in Portland, Oregon, to talk about a t-shirt, and instead, by complete accident, formed a consultancy that uses improvisation to help organizations create, relate, and communicate... all while having a ridiculously good time. Since then, we've been sharing the power of improv to make work and life better at conferences all over the world for clients such as Nike, GE, Xerox, Daimler, Pfizer, Procter & Gamble, Intel, Converse, and Disney. Our work inevitably begins with your needs for an event. We then collaborate with you to customize our sessions to ensure they're both fun and useful for your specific audience and objectives. With a combination of performance and interactive learning centered around your content, we add to the energy, laughter, and learning that you've already envisioned. All the members of On Your Feet are improvisers—and more! We have among us people with professional backgrounds in HR, marketing, film and television, visual arts, business education, and vast non-profit experience—not to mention a snow cone baron! We're headquartered in Portland, Oregon, with satellites in Minneapolis and New York City
